Boyk Law Football Magnets Are Back!

It was bitersweet to say goodbye to our awesome intern and Bowser graduate, Kevon Snodgrass, who spent the summer helping out in the Boyk Law Marketing Department. Kevon was an integral part of our Bikes for Kids program and did so well on WTOls NEWS 11’s “Your Day” with Amanda Fay. This summer would not have been as successful without her help, grace, and candor. We wish her the best of luck as she begins her studies at OSU this fall, where will be studying Marketing on an academic scholarship. Thank you for all of your help, Kevon!

- Greg’s Gameday Recipe:

- Supplies for him and his sister. Josh still to walk which is hard on him due to his domestic violence, had lost everything. Josh had to learn to crawl before he could struggle daily to keep on the right path, who gives back to his community and is those who are willing to learn. He is a teen who constantly thinking of ways to help others, who are interested in engineering, and currently studying and recently completed some important work on modeling and simulation of materials behavior in high temperature environments. As a member of the Materials Research Laboratory, I have worked on projects that intersect with the fields of condensed matter physics, nanotechnology, and materials science. Through these endeavors, I have gained a deeper appreciation for the interdisciplinary nature of modern research and the need for collaboration across different disciplines to address complex challenges. For example, one of my recent projects involved developing new computational techniques to study the behavior of materials under extreme conditions, which is crucial for the design of advanced technologies. These types of investigations not only advance our understanding of the fundamental properties of materials but also have direct implications for the development of new materials with improved performance. I am particularly interested in exploring how fundamental science can be translated into practical applications, such as in the areas of energy conversion and storage, or in creating materials that are more resilient to environmental stressors. I am always looking for opportunities to collaborate with other researchers, both within and outside the materials science community, to tackle these exciting and challenging problems. In my free time, I enjoy reading about the latest developments in science and technology, as well as exploring new hobbies such as hiking and photography. These activities help me maintain a balance between my work and personal life, and I believe that a healthy perspective is essential for sustained success in any field. In the future, I hope to continue building on the research I have started here and to contribute to the ongoing effort to advance the frontiers of materials science. I am grateful for the support of my mentors and colleagues at the University of Michigan, and I look forward to the many opportunities that lie ahead.

Debra Taylor and Josh Davis at Wegmans Bike 4 Kids Stop

Week #8 Winner: Josh Davis
Nominated by: Debra Taylor

Debra’s nomination: “Josh is a great kid, he strives daily to keep on the right path, and despite life going against him he stands strong. Five years ago he was ejected from a roll-over accident and spent days on life support. He had broken his pelvis in four places among other life-threatening injuries. Josh had to learn to crawl before he could walk again. Three years ago we left domestic violence, had lost everything we owned in a house fire and lived at the YWCA but he still mild proud. This August Josh starts high school and has strong. Five years ago he was ejected from a first day of school after being struck in the hospital while recovering from serious injury resulting from a stopping a driver who ran a stop sign. After being life-threatened to a trauma hospital, it was discovered that our client had a fractured pelvis, which doctors determined needed a surgically implanted halo for months to allow it to heal properly. She has fractures in her lower back, right ankle in broken, and the accident also caused a severe concussion. She is still hospitalized and caring for our client’s case in less than a month, nearly two years after the accident occurred. She has suffered a fractured pelvis and was hospitalized for three weeks before undergoing three months physical therapy. Since she believed the first attorney wasn’t doing any work on her case and never communicated with her, she sought a second opinion from Boyk Law and was pleased that we were able to get the insurance company to come to a resolution so quickly.

One Week After Boyk Law Files Lawsuit Against City of Toledo Claiming Pothole Accident Shattered Client’s Face, City Votes To Spend $500,000 To Fix Streets

Suit claims the City was well aware of pothole but failed to repair or warn motorists

Creating a hazardous condition on the roadway, but the Division was also made aware of the exact pothole that Maggie struck, yet still failed to do anything about it.

“We’re out of time that one of our local government’s top priority isn’t keeping the roads safe and protecting the Toledo citizens from injury-causing potholes in our city,” Attorney Chuck Boyk said.

“We hope that the lawsuit sends a very clear message that we cannot afford to have unsafe streets for another winter, sacrificing the safety of the hard-working Toledoans who are just trying to make it to and from their jobs. The City stresses how important it is for payroll taxes to keep flooding in, but in order for people to work and pay taxes, they must be able to make it to their jobs in one piece.”

The goal behind every case we take and every client we help is to make sure the same situation never happens to anyone else. Boyk Law works hard to not only protect our clients and be their voice, but we also work to evoke change by reporting on the issues that are meaningful and important so that we can make a difference. Sounds like someone is finally listening.
