“I was involved in a motor vehicle accident, which resulted in injury and a totaled car. Charles Boyk was recommended to me to handle the details and compensation for my pain and suffering. I sat with Mr. Boyk and a staff member, (I don’t recall her name), to go over the details of the accident, insurance, medical treatments, etc. They handled every detail, and Katie kept me updated with the progress of my claim on a regular basis. I was very satisfied with the end result. Mr. Boyk, and his staff were so helpful and always available to answer any questions. I am so glad I contacted this firm to handle the details and compensation for my pain and suffering,” said Antrone. Antrone “Juice” Williams was a college athlete who went on to play semi-pro basketball. But on September 26, 2012, his life forever changed. He woke up in a hospital, having spent 10 days in a coma after suffering a massive brain hemorrhage stroke. When Antrone awoke, he couldn’t walk or talk and was given a 50/50 chance of surviving. His family was told if he did survive, he could be paralyzed and likely spend the rest of his life in a wheelchair. The doctor asked his mother, “Is he a fighter?” and she proudly said, “He is.”

Antrone spent the next two months in the hospital fighting to recover. “My kids needed me, my family needed me, failure was not an option,” said Antrone. Fueled by his incredible faith and will to prevail, he went from his bed, to a wheelchair, to a walker, back to his own two legs. While the stroke would leave him with permanent injuries, Antrone was determined to recover to his fullest potential. His efforts paid off in a way he never envisaged.

In February of this year, Antrone “Juice” Williams led his team, the Lucas County Lightening, to a gold medal at the state Winter Special Olympics. Juice credits Special Olympics with giving him purpose after the stroke and says that by being a part of Special Olympics, he was able to get back to where he is now. His goal is to inspire others and to get the whole community involved with Special Olympics. He explains that his stroke has given him an opportunity to show kids that just because you have a disability doesn’t mean you can’t be great. Bar Patron Suffers Broken Hip And Femur After Being Shoved From Barstool

Our client was a bar patron, sitting by himself on a high stool at a two-person table when another bar patron who had over-consumed alcohol intentionally bumped into him. The bartender was notified of the intoxicated patron’s behavior and refused to serve him anymore alcohol. Afterwards, the intoxicated patron became more aggressive, causing a scene with outrageous behavior including taking other guest’s drinks. Instead of escorting the intoxicated patron out of the bar, the bartender played pool, ignoring the scene around him. Eventually, the intoxicated patron came back to our client and shoved him forcefully off of his stool. Our client fell hard to the ground, slamming his hip and breaking his femur. He has undergone surgery and physical therapy for treatment of his broken leg bones and faces a long recovery. Our office is pursuing a claim against the bar for failing to provide adequate security against a known danger.

Man Trapped In Vehicle When Drunk Driver Fails To Yield

Our client was traveling in Bowling Green, Ohio directly behind the vehicle her father and sister were traveling in. The young woman brought her vehicle to a stop as traffic stopped in front of her. Suddenly and without warning, a man traveling approximately 40 mph slammed into the rear of the woman's car. Her vehicle was pushed violently forward into the rear of her father's vehicle. Due to the high impact, the young woman's car was sent airborne before coming to land upside down. The young woman's family witnessed the horrific collision and were first to approach the mangled vehicle that she was trapped in. EMS arrived on scene and transported our client to the emergency room, where she received treatment for injuries including to her head, neck, arm, and abdomen. Our office was retained to represent the young woman for her personal injuries as well as her family's distress in witnessing the traumatic event.
